

Illinois Natural History Survey Traveling Science Center Visits Putnam County Public Library

Join us, when the Putnam County Public Library invites the public to stop by Hopkins Park in Granville to visit the Illinois Natural History Survey (INHS) Traveling Science Center as part of the Library's 2024 Summer Program, "Read, Renew, Repeat."

The INHS Traveling Science Center is a 320 square foot mobile classroom that features informational and engaging hands-on exhibits about Illinois biodiversity and natural resources. Visitors will learn about habitats, flora and fauna of Illinois by exploring interactive, educational panels, stunning displays, props and handouts.

The event is free, open to the public, and is made possible through generous support by Boggio's Orchard & Produce, Financial Plus Credit Union, Granville National Bank, and North Central Bank.

The Putnam County Public Library (Granville Branch) is located at 214 S. McCoy Street, Granville, Illinois, 61326. For more information, please call the Library at 815-339-2038.
