Description

The Henry George School of Social Science is a non-profit school that teaches courses on progress and poverty. The school is located in downtown Chicago. The school offers several classes that have credits which are transferrable to institutions aligned with the State University of New York (SUNY) system.

The library's collection is mostly focused on works related to land use, economics, and human rights. The library is interested in joining RAILS in order to access interlibrary loan delivery, continuing education, grants, and support for e-books.
